stage was a portrait of President Roosebut the decorations were soon forgotten amid the wild scenes of chaos that followed.

Mr. Treat was the whole thing from the start, and Chairman Snead stuck by him like a little man. FIERCELY ATTACKED.

FIERCELY ATTACKED.

His rulings were fiercely and savagely attacked by Messrs. Russell. Williams and Allan, and warmly defended by Mr. Trcat, Mr. Allan really led the fight for the "outs." He wanted the Williams delegates from Richmond put upon the temporary roll as well as the contesting temporary roll, as well as the contesting delegates from Goochland, but the chair would never put his motions. He then ob-jected to the mode of appointment of the committee on credentials, and charged that if selected by the chair it would be "packed." But in all these motions he failed, for the chair ruled them out of order as fast as they were made.

There were several narrow escapes from personal clashes, and crimination, recrim-ination and bitter personal allusions were the order of the day.

Mr. N. J. Smith made a charge which seemed to reflect upon the political integ-rity of General Edgar Allan and Mr. Rus-sell, and Mr. Allan, Jr., and Mr. Russell branded it as wilfully false. But there were no personal encounters, and all that was said was for political effect. It is said that the fight is one for recognition in Washington, and that the contest will be taken before the National Committee for settlement.

For temporary chairman, Mr. Treat nominated Dr. L. A. Slater, of New Kent.

HOT AFTER THE CHAIR,

HOT AFTER THE CHAIR.

After the wrangle between Mr. Smith and Messrs. Allan and Russell, which made it look as if there might be a personal clash at any time. Mr. M. M. Willams denounced the ruling of the chair as arbitrary, and he became involved in a long controversy with Mr. Treat, who was defending the chair.

Meanwhile Mr. Snead sat slient in his seat with a great block of wood in his hand, with which he often vigorously pounded the table. Ben Scott assailed the chair, and said if Mr. Snead had any "axe to grind" he ought to say so. There were a dozen motions and all of them were ignored, the chair declaring that the only motion was that with reference to effecting a temporary organization. The county of Goochland was taken by the "outs" as the entering wedge, and they demanded that the chair put Ben Scott's motion, that the chair put Ben Scott's from Goochland be placed upon the temporary roll. The chair stuck to his temporary roll. The chair stuck to his rulings, and Messrs. Allan, Williams and others were before the stage with uplifted hands excitedly declaring that they would stay here until judgment day or get their

WANTED "HARMONIOUSNESS." A little black negro tried to speak. He aid: "Mr. Cheerman, we come here today for peace and 'harmoniousness,' and we demand our rights."

A motion to adjourn for dinner was made, but the chair ruled it out, and said Mr. Treat's motion was the only one in order. The wildest scene of confusion prevailed.

Mr. Snead hammered the table and proceeded to call the roll on the question of a temporary chairman. Mr. Treat had a seat near by, and was an interested speciator, sometimes con-ferring with the chair. Messrs. Williams and Allan charged that the Marshal was running the convention, and said they would fight for their rights and die in their tracks if need be. An effort was made to name another candidate for chairman, but Mr. Snead pro-ceeded to call the roll on Dr. Slater's demination.

It was charged that Mr. Treat was coaching the delegates, but finally, amid shouts of applause, mingled with protests, Dr. Slater was declared elected, and Mr. reat led the new chairman to the stand J. R. Pollard (colored) was made tem-porary secretary, and it had taken more han an hour to proceed this far. Mr. Treat moved the appointment by the chair of a commutee on credentials from the uncontested delegation, which should report at 3 o'clock. A STRONG PROTEST.

The chair was about to put the motion, but Mr. Allan made a strong speech against such proceedings, declaring that all the delegations should be given representation.

"If you steal my vote here to-day," said 'Ir, Allan, "you cannot accuse the Democrats of this on the stump, and the man who would steal my vote would steal my

He wanted all the delegations with credentials from county and city chairmen placed on the temporary roll. Mr. Allan said he was opposed to the chair naming the committee, as he would not even give a fair ruling much less appoint a fair nmittee. The chair took the bit in his committee. The chief took the Mr. II. order the pending question." This was done, and on demand, the roll was called and Mr. Treat's motion declared adopted.

Mr. Williams here led a break to one corner of the room, he and Mr. Allan de-claring vengeance against what they termed Morgan Treat and his rough

The nomination was seconded by several delegates and a short, black negro, in joining in, made a bitter attack upon the new Constitution. He called for the taking down of Mr. Talley in the interest of harmony and a bold fight. Mr. Edwards was named by acclamation and was called for and made a brief speech accepting the honor. The following members of the State Committee were then chosen by acclamation: Major Augustus Norton, Goochland county; S. H.
